Arthur and the Double Dare is a book in the Arthur Chapter Book series. In this episode, Arthur, Buster, Francine, and the Brain all dare each other to skip school for a whole day. One thing leads to another, and suddenly they all dare each other to skip school! This episode is part of the fifth season of the television series Arthur, which was originally broadcast on PBS.

Arthur and the Double Dare is a humorous story about the challenges of balancing school and homework. Arthur and his friends are given too much homework, and they dare each other to skip school to avoid having to complete their assignments.

The book is written by Marc Brown, the creator of the bestselling Arthur Adventure book series. It is suitable for fans ready to read on their own. The story follows Arthur and his friends as they navigate the situations that arise from their dare.

In this new chapter book, Arthur and his friends dare each other to skip school to avoid having to complete their assignments. Francine is the one who dare them, and Arthur and his friends start to understand the importance of owning up to their mistakes and working hard to complete their assignments.

The book is available at various online retailers, such as Amazon, and at bookstores like Barnes & Noble. It is also available for checkout through library catalogs.