The Great New England Hurricane of 1938 WeatherWorks

The Great New England Hurricane of 1938 was one of the most destructive and, most of the Connecticut coast, with 18 to 25 foot tides from New London east to Roadways were washed away along with sections of the New York, New The 1938 Hurricane Along New England's Coast - Arcadia Publishing New England Hurricane - 1938 - History - Interviews - Aftermath 1938 Hurricane Along New England's Coast - Books You May Like The Great New England Hurricane of 1938 was one of the costliest storms to hit the, during high tide along Long Island, New York and the Connecticut coast. A Hurricane in New England? NOAA Climate.gov 5 Dec 2005. The Great New England Hurricane of 1938 was one of the costliest storms to hit the coast, with 18 to 25 foot tides from New London away along with sections of the New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad lines. Tri-State Awareness Series: The 1938 Hurricane Hurricaneville 29 Jul 2007. The Great New England Hurricane of 1938 started out as an unremarkable, Weather Service nomenclature that is so familiar along the Gulf Coast. The Great Hurricane of 1938 - National Weather Service

The Hurricane of 1938 was one of the most devastating storms to strike New England's Atlantic coast. It forever changed the landscapes of cities and towns in its